

Reaching the 'hard to reach': child-teacher dialogue to promote inclusion in classrooms

Free event: Friday 12th June 2020, 10:00 – 14:30

Wide Lane Sports Grounds Meeting Rooms,
University of Southampton

Join us in this free event to:

- Learn about the findings of a three-year study (2017-2020) that involved schools in five European countries
- Hear first hand experiences from teachers and children in Southampton who participated in the study
- Have the opportunity to listen to key researchers who were involved: Professors Kiki Messiou (University of Southampton – project lead) and Mel Ainscow (University of Manchester – methodological consultant)
- Receive a free pack of materials that you can use within your school

The project trialed and evaluated Inclusive Inquiry:

This innovative approach involves children becoming researchers and working collaboratively with their teachers in order to design lessons that include all pupils, particularly those who might be seen as 'hard to reach'.

Who is this event for?

- Primary, special and secondary school teachers
- Policy makers
- Support staff
- Families
- Researchers and educational consultants

Arrangements

This is a free event. In addition, each eligible participant is entitled to up to £85.00 claiming back travel and accommodation expenses, if needed, provided that the University of Southampton regulations are followed before making bookings. Please, email us, for further information.

Location: Wide Lane is situated within minutes walk from Southampton Airport Parkway Train Station and Southampton Airport.

There is ample free parking available.

Tea/coffee will be served on arrival from 9:30 a.m.

Light lunch will also be provided.

Booking

Places are limited. Please, book by 20th April 2020.

Any questions, please contact:
EducationFOS@soton.ac.uk

For more information about the project:
<https://reachingthehardtoreach.eu/>

